Eager GI's Hopeful Arrival at Border Will Hasten War's End

By Irving K. Levine
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SEOUL, Nov. 21.—(INS)—Jubilant GI's planted the American and United Nations flag today on the south bank of the Yalu river border facing Manchuria as South Korean troops to the east drive within 68 miles of Soviet Siberia.

Tanks, guns and trucks of the U. S. Seventh Infantry Division's pace-making 17th Regiment rolled through the captured northeast Korean frontier city of Hyesanjin to strengthen their positions on the international boundary.

Hopeful that their arrival at the Yalu may hasten the war's end, the eager GI's could gaze from their new-won strip of riverside territory directly into Red China's city of Changpai on the opposite bank.

Seventy miles to the east, the ROK (Republic of Korea) Capitol Division, supported by U. S. warships, broke through heavy Communist resistance and rammed ten miles farther up the coast of Korea's elongated and now-isolated northeast tip.

This new South Korean offensive sent spearheads up to Chuchon-huijang, only 68 air miles southwest of the short Siberian-Korean Tumen river border and 25 miles below the prize North Korean industrial port of Chongjin.

Far to the southwest meanwhile other South Korean divisions pushed through weakening opposition and complete capture of the strategic 30-mile lateral road from Kunuri to Tokchon on the central front. Gains up to six miles were scored in this advance Monday.

1,000 Attend Neshaminy Youth Center Dedication

NEWTOWN, Nov. 21.—Neshaminy Valley Youth Center was dedicated Friday evening with "Ronnie" Young playing the piano accordion for the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Greetings were given by Burgess Stone, after which Ezra Harty, the Henry Aldrich of radio fame, acted as master of ceremonies. He introduced Dr. John E. Mertz, pastor of Newtown Presbyterian church, who gave the address of the evening.

Throughout the evening, Mr. Stone used his "Henry Aldrich" voice, off and on, in the introduction of participants of the program. Dr. A. J. Strathie introduced each member of the Board of Directors.

Approximately 1,000 persons were shown through the center after the dedication exercises, with Sara Seeger, cutting the ribbon allowing entrance.

Refreshments were served downstairs. Hostesses for the evening were representatives of the 12 sponsoring organizations.

CADET ASS'N

A meeting of the Cadet Association, Chester Terchon Post, V. F. W., will be held in the Post home, Franklin street, this evening at 8.30.

AF COVER FOR THE ARMY

In elevating ground-support aviation to the status of a major command, the Air Force has not acted a bit too soon. From the combat Army infantry in Korea have come too many cries of "Why in the blankety-blank-blank can't the Air Force give us doggies the kind of support the Marine fliers give their guys on the ground?"

The news is that next month the present Continental Air Command will be split into three outfits of the same echelon level: the Air Defense Command with headquarters at Mitchel Field, N. Y., the Continental Air Command for civilian training (also at Mitchel), and the Tactical Air Command at Langley Field, Va.

It is the last-named outfit which has new importance in the decision to bring closer teamwork between air and ground forces. The TAC will report directly to General Vandenberg, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

Not so long before outbreak of the fighting in Korea the Air Force made an effort to interest the Army in setting up a joint training program. Air Force fliers would be assigned duty with the ground forces. On several levels of command—down to battalions—the Army would explain in detail exactly what kind of support it wanted, and the Air Force would try to fill the bill.

Doubtless fighter and low-level bomber pilots often can make suggestions to infantry commanders for better, more efficient, work. Should the infantry or the aircraft destroy a particular bridge? That's the sort of thing the two outfits would want to decide almost automatically. But nothing complex can be done that way without a meeting of minds and plenty of actual training.

GOLD OUT OF FT. KNOX

The time may soon arrive when a joke people have been laughing at these many years would be funny any more. Believe it or not, the gold buried at Ft. Knox seems to be on the way toward usefulness again.

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer pointed to this possibility in a speech at the thirty-seventh National Foreign Trade Convention at New York City. He said recent striking gains in international trade indicate that gold may again serve as a medium for settling trade balances among nations.

Actually, gold is already flowing out of this country to European banks. But what Secretary Sawyer had in mind, as he explained, is that the world trade picture has greatly changed during this year. In 1947 this country's total export surplus was estimated at the "phenomenal" total of $11,500,000,000, he said. In the first six months of 1950 it was $2,900,000,000—but in the third quarter it "virtually disappeared."

That means that a tremendous change has occurred in this nation's foreign trade position—and, of course, in the position of the nations that trade with the U. S.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"
By FULTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1950, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — Max Lowenthal, one of President Truman's ace instructors in liberal thinking, considers the Federal Bureau of Investigation a waste of taxpayers' money and a detriment to the welfare of the U. S. A.

In his new book on the F. B. I., Lowenthal expresses these views in chapter after chapter, and in one instance goes back 39 years to gripe about J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the F. B. I.

In 1920 the Justice Department ordered a roundup of Communist and other illegal aliens in the U. S. for the purpose of instituting deportation proceedings. This event, known as the Palmer Raids, is described in detail in a book by Louis F. Post. Lowenthal quotes at length from the Post opus and in the process virtually blames Hoover for the whole thing.

One thing of interest to note here is that Hoover was then in his twenties and was doing administrative work in the Justice Department. The F. B. I. was only a gleam in his eye at that time. In addition, Hoover had nothing to do with ordering the Palmer raids, and Post, the one historian who did know the story, never even listed Hoover's name in the index of his book. But Lowenthal cites the arrests as another example of how, in his opinion, the F. B. I. and Hoover are a threat to our liberties.

The Lowenthal book is published by William Sloane Associates, Inc., of New York. On the fly leaf of the cover Lowenthal is described as a conservative who does not editorialize or draw conclusions, is carelessly with associates who are anything but conservative. As for conclusions, he blames the F. B. I. for running a police state, and then immediately bawls out Hoover for not catching enough atom spies.

On the record, Hoover's agents followed a spy trail that was four years old in order to haul into court the Americans who worked with Klaus Fuchs. Fuchs would never have happened if the British secret service had been on the ball. As it was, the F. B. I. and Canadian agents handed the first tip on Fuchs to the British.

Scolding at F. B. I. detection methods, Lowenthal indicates that the only reason G-Men ever broke a pre-Pearl Harbor spy ring was that a German agent had the bad luck to be involved in a traffic accident in New York.

The truth of the matter is that German agents in the Ludwig ring had been under F. B. I. surveillance for months. The first tip came to the F. B. I. not as a result of the traffic accident, but via a British censor who intercepted a letter that did not read right. He turned it over to the F. B. I. and it was put through the wringer. Invisible ink writing, calling for data on shipments to England, set the F. B. I. counter-espionage experts in operation.

All of this is a matter of record in the court where the Germans were convicted, but Lowenthal missed it in his research.

Lowenthal quotes former Senator Carl Hatch (D., N. M.) to bolster his argument that the F. B. I. as it now operates is a threat to our welfare. He quotes Hatch as saying:

"Granting everything I say about the ability with which Mr. Hoover has conducted the F. B. I., every one of us knows that it is a very great power he now exercises. Senators would further broaden that arbitrary power—giving control to the police just as the people of Czechoslovakia did in their poor country."

What he could have added, but did not, is another Hatch quote: "I want, again, as I did the other day, to commend Mr. Hoover himself for the attitude he has taken on this and other matters, and for his very efficient administration of the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Lowenthal is a critic of F. B. I. wiretapping operations. So, it might be noted, are other individuals such as Rep. Vito Marcantonio, whose Communist-supporting record caught up with him a couple of weeks ago when voters of his New York City district decided they had had enough of him in Congress; and Pedro Albizu Campos, the ex-convict head of the Communist-controlled Nationalist Party of Puerto Rico.

Lowenthal accuses the F. B. I. of lying to a Federal Judge about wiretapping in the Coplon case. This should be news to the Judge. The facts on record are that on Jan. 20, 1950, the Federal Judge presiding in the case stated publicly that the F. B. I. had independent proof of the spying activities of Judith Coplon and her Soviet playmate which had not been obtained by wire taps. The fact is, also, that it is legal to tap wires when the Attorney General orders it done. The only restriction is that the evidence obtained must not be used in court. Without it, successful spy hunting would be stopped cold in most cases. Lowenthal has lived long enough to know this.

In piling up a record against the F. B. I., which Lowenthal has all but made his life work, it seems fair to ask for all the evidence. In his references to the Amerasia case, Lowenthal admits he is confused about whether or not F. B. I. agents conducted illegal searches of private residences of the individuals involved in the theft of 1,406 secret government documents. His confusion hardly seems justified. The F. B. I. has stated explicitly on repeated occasions that all the evidence seized was taken incidentally to arrest and with legal warrants. The Hobbs report on the matter specifically clears the F. B. I. and the minority report of the same committee commends the Bureau for "zeal and efficiency" in handling the case. Lowenthal could have asked the F. B. I. about this before writing his book, but at no time did he call on Mr. Hoover.

Lowenthal and his publisher explain that the book has been written in the interest of national security. It will take another book to explain that one.

Taxes Will Be Higher, Says Johnson

say, will hinge on the size of the mobilization program.

Alan Valentine, head of the newly organized Economic Stabilization Agency, sees the battle to curb inflation as first in order, but warns that in any stabilization of wages and prices some inequities are bound to occur.

In short, some people are going to be hurt.

With respect to taxes, the big question yet to be determined is exactly how much and in just what forms.

Some estimate of the staggering cost is seen in relation to the spending in World War II.

Top economic advisers say that to duplicate the maximum effort of World War II, at present price levels, would cost approximately $150 billions a year!

The top budget during that war was only $98 billions by comparison, and that was the entire budget, with $84 billions for military expenditures.

As yet, barring sudden all-out war, the present mobilization program does not contemplate spending of such magnitude.

President Truman, committed to a pay-as-you-go defense economy, says that military spending for the current fiscal year, starting July 1 last, will total more than $30 billions, with an additional $15 billions appropriated for non-military items.

A program under consideration for the next five years calls for military spending at an estimated rate of $60 billions a year, to start in 1951.

The economic experts believe that the national economy can stand such a spending jolt if the total national income exceeds $300 billions a year.

The gross national income now runs close to the $300 billion rate, it is estimated.

It is believed that Government spending will total $100 billions a year before world peace is firmly established and that the gross national income will have to total $400 billions to sustain such spending.

Though faced with the problem of raising an estimated minimum of $40 billions for defense alone or more likely $60 billions, within the next fiscal year, it is not believed that the Administration will attempt to raise more than $10 billions in new taxes in the immediate future.

The 1950 income tax increase bill, effective October 1, was approximately 20 per cent, affecting some 40 million taxpayers. It is designed to yield an additional $4.7 billions, bringing the total tax yield to some $42 billions.

The withholding tax rate is now 18 per cent of income after deductions. Previously it was 15 per cent.

Any new increase in income taxes is likely to be at the rate of 25 per cent, it is predicted.

Thus if your withholding tax was $10 a week before Korea it is now up to $12 and a further increase probably will bring it to $15 a week.

The tax experts figure that, according to present yield, a $60-billion budget would leave about $1 billions to be raised from additional individual income taxes.

One proposal is for an "excess income tax" on that much of the individual income which exceeds the average income over a previous specified period, say of three years.

Already before Congress is an Administration-proposed excess profits tax on big business, with emphasis on "war goods" and defense material profits.

The Congressional tax staff also is investigating the possible effects of a general retail sales tax, superimposed on present state sales taxes.

Aside from the increased taxes you will pay, in one form or another, the Government hopes to effect economies to help pay for mobilization for defense.

They might include a reduction in public works and veterans' expenditures; a reduction in non-military foreign aid, and cutting agricultural support price aid down to nothing, because farm prices should stay high under mobilization spending anyway.

One expert added, smiling: "And pork should go into cold storage for the duration."

He was referring to pork barrel legislation—the ancient prerogative of the Congress.

Jubilant G.I.'s Plant U. S. and U. N. Flags on Bank Of Yalu Facing Manchuria

Commonwealth and ROK patrols jabbed at a thick belt of Chinese and Korean Red defenses into which the enemy poured reinforcements and supplies.

The history-making arrival of American troops at the Manchurian border in northeast Korea climaxed an epic 22-day march of 100 miles over snow-sheathed mountains in Arctic temperatures that dipped as low as 22 below zero.

Reaching the Korean side of the winding Yalu just beyond Hyesanjin, the gallant 17th Regiment became the first American unit to advance to Korea's northern boundary.

From their new positions, which they quickly strengthened against any possible flanking counterattacks by the Reds, the G.I.'s looked across the river into the Manchurian city of Ghangpai.

Their courageous advance to the frontier, during which they overcame enemy resistance that tapered from heavy to feeble, split the North Korean Chinese and Korean Red forces in two.

It sliced off the peninsula's northeast arm—which slants up to the eight-mile long Tumen river border adjoining Siberia—from the rest of Korea.

It was the second time that a United Nations force had reached the Manchurian boundary.

The feat was first accomplished last month by a regiment of the ROK Sixth Division which arrived at the Yalu river just above Chosan in central North Korea. This regiment was cut off by counter-attacking Chinese Red troops and its survivors fell back 60 or 70 miles.

The arrival of the Americans at the Yalu boosted the morale of G.I.'s throughout Korea, providing them with a special reason for observing the Thanksgiving holiday two days hence.

Many of them voiced the hope this event may produce proof that Gen. MacArthur's forces have no intention of crossing the Yalu into Manchuria. It may therefore give the Chinese Red forces a face-saving formula for withdrawing from Korea and ending the war.

SEMI-FINAL PLAYOFF SCHEDULED TONIGHT

The semi-final playoff game of the Northeast Conference between St. Ann's A. A. and Ditman will be played on the Bristol High School field, Sunday afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock.

Efforts were made at a meeting last night to have the game played on the Disston field, Philadelphia, but the St. Ann's representatives insisted on the game being played here as the Bristol fans deserve to see at least one playoff game of the loop without traveling out of town to see it.

After discussing the matter pro and con, the Disston management agreed to play the game on the local gridiron.

The St. Ann's management is now making arrangements for game ceremonies as this will be the first Northeast Conference playoff to be played here.

Ditman won the regular season championship with six wins and won defeat St. Ann's won five games and lost three during the season. Earlier in the season, Ditman topped the Bristol contingent, 8-6, winning the tilt on a safety.
